ANZAM
AUSTRALIAN & NEW ZEALAND
ACADEMY OF MANAGEMENT

ANZAM Institutional member representatives – please join us.....

Facilitator: Professor Ben Farr-Wharton
Associate Dean (Business Administration),
Edith Cowan University

Have you ever wondered why business students appear to pay so much for their course, and yet many departments financially struggle? Also, we often hear that this or that business school is in deficit, and yet, their hosting university remains in the black. In this talk, Ben will host an open forum to give general answers to the ‘why’ questions we often ask of our universities, in relation to their business function. The talk is not designed to be technical or financial in nature, rather, the intention is to illuminate some of the underlying funding structures that underpin how universities and business schools operate. The talk may be particularly relevant to early and mid-career academics.

Professor Ben Farr-Wharton is a long-time friend of the ANZAM community. A former co-chair of the Health Management and Organisation SIG of ANZAM, Ben has had a fifteen-year academic career, covering employment at five Australian universities. Ben’s current role as the Associate Dean of Business Administration and Management at Edith Cowan University’s School of Business and Law has seen him navigate funding and workload challenges (particularly over the COVID-19 pandemic), develop industry income pathways for the School, and help to negotiate an enterprise agreement.

During the presentation, Ben will provide a brief, general overview of some of the underpinning funding structures of business schools and will then open the floor to (not too) tough questions.

From Sustainable Business to Regenerative Business

Averting catastrophic environmental disaster and the human consequences thereof

Recent revelations about planetary health, the state of the natural environment and the impact of the natural environment on human health, highlight how urgent it is for all areas of society, including business, to come together in a coordinated effort to not only avert environmental and human catastrophe, but to ensure that both people and planet can flourish moving forward into the second half of this decade.

ECU Centre for People, Place & Planet (CPPP) in collaboration with ANZAM Sustainability and Responsible Management Special Interest Group invites you to a presentation by Associate Professor Dave Webb (University of Western Australia) on the role of business and education in respect to planetary health (environmental health and human health). In his presentation, Associate Professor Dave Webb will argue why it is no longer enough for businesses to be sustainable. Instead, he argues the urgent need for businesses to become regenerative.

Join us for a lively presentation and discussion and learn about what you and your business can do to contribute toward a regenerative future.

Authentic Leadership: 20-Year Review

20-Years after The Leadership Quarterly 2005 Special Issue that launched a new field of authentic leadership research, we are curating a state-of-the-science review that will take stock of the work that's been done since, and the challenges that remain, to set a future research agenda. Authentic leadership theory is hotly debated in the field and research interest is on a strong upward trend, supported by a burgeoning of empirical contributions. Critical perspectives have done little to stem the production of authentic leadership research and the popularity of the construct continues to increase. The time is right to launch a Special Issue that's positively framed and will help shape inevitable future contributions by guiding scholars' efforts towards identifying and resolving the challenges facing authentic leadership theory.
